WHY CREATIVE WELLBEING AT WORK?

Every workplace is built around people.

When people have opportunities to pause, reconnect, move, reflect and engage with one another differently, it can create space for renewed energy, perspective and connection.

I design and facilitate creative wellbeing experiences for workplaces and professional teams, bringing together accessible movement, creative expression, mindfulness, reflective practice and meaningful conversation. The emphasis is not on artistic ability or performance.

Activities are designed to be accessible, engaging and adaptable, giving participants opportunities to step outside everyday work roles, explore something different and reconnect with themselves and one another.

Creative wellbeing can support:

- reflection and self-awareness
- team connection
- communication and shared experience
- stress awareness and regulation
- creativity and fresh thinking
- confidence and curiosity
- moments of play and enjoyment
- restorative space within demanding working environments

Approach:

My approach is relational, embodied and process-led.

I create welcoming, non-judgemental spaces where people are encouraged to participate in ways that feel comfortable and accessible to them.

Rather than asking everyone to complete an activity in the same way, I adapt creative experiences around the people in the room.

Participants may be invited to move, make, reflect, notice, choose, experiment or connect — without pressure to perform or produce a particular result.

For me, the value often lies not in what is created, but in what happens during the process:

- a moment of curiosity,
- a different conversation,
- a shared laugh,
- a new perspective,
- a sense of connection,
- or simply permission to pause.

Every workshop is tailored according to the organisation, group size, setting and intended purpose.
